Indicative syllabus content

London is one of Europe's greatest cities, with a fascinating history stretching back over two thousand years. Originally built by the Romans, it has endured a long history of war and civil war, fire, famine and plague. It has survived aerial bombardment and terrorism, yet remains a fascinating mosaic of distinct villages, which has given shelter to successive generations of those fleeing persecution and poverty in other lands. It is home to the British monarchy and British parliament, and is the cockpit of British life and culture. This class aims to offer an introduction to a new history of London and to the specialism of 'public history', based in part on recent archaeological research and visits to London museums. The class thus aims to provide students with the knowledge and skills to evaluate how and how well the history of London is presented to audiences of non-historians. The class will examine inter alia:

- Roman London
- London in the Middle Ages
- Georgian and Victorian London
- London at War
- Theory and methodology of historical presentation and representation
- Representation of historical London in museums and galleries.

Teaching and learning methods

The class is delivered via lectures, seminars and visits. Lectures provide the historical and theoretical framework of the class while seminars allow time for student-led group discussion of issues raised in the lectures and visits. Visits to appropriate museums and galleries form an essential part of this class and are therefore an integral part of the teaching scheme.

Assessment rationale

Assessment is designed to allow the student to demonstrate knowledge of an aspect of London's history as presented to the public in a museum or gallery and the ability to do so in both oral and written form. In doing so they will be able to demonstrate their understanding of the nature of 'public history' and its associated difficulties. It is also intended to allow students to demonstrate the key skills of use of use of ICT, literacy and ability to argue a case in both written and oral form.

Assessment criteria

Presentation:

Students will be assessed on the extent to which they have demonstrated:

- Understanding of the topic addressed
- Incorporation of critical source material
- Engagement with the audience
- Quality of presentation in relation to audible delivery, clarity and structure; appropriate use of presentation aids (such as handouts, whiteboard, DVD, Powerpoint).

Report:

Students will be expected to employ a good level of written expression and academic register, and will be assessed additionally in relation to:

- Focused response to the topic
- Development of a coherent argument supported by appropriate examples
- Evidence of engagement with issues discussed during the module
- Range of research and secondary reading, appropriately referenced.
