

WHY VOLUNTEER ABROAD with CISaustralia?

As a volunteer going to another country, it is important to make informed and responsible decisions about the program provider you choose. It is critical to select an organisation that is committed to sustainable practices, ethical engagement with host communities, and that considers the impact of its programs on the environment, host communities and volunteers.

experiential service learning vs voluntourism

At CISaustralia, we encourage our participants to understand the difference between "voluntourism" on one side of the volunteering spectrum, and a deeper, more culturally immersive experience that CISaustralia strives for – "experiential service learning".

We want our participants to think and reflect about the impacts they are making in the various communities around the globe so that students can understand their experience on a deeper level – a very different experience to being a tourist!

In selecting volunteer partners and projects, CISaustralia looks for:

Sustainability and longevity – Projects that are making a positive, long-term difference.

Structure - Partners that have a clear track record

Or delivering quality programs, with strong risk-management profiles.

Experienced staff – People who care and work closely with both communities and program participants.

Formal partnership – CISaustralia has written agreements in place with all project partners and each have gone through a due diligence, risk assessment and quality assurance process.

CISaustralia engages in ongoing and detailed training with our program partners. Our staff regularly travel to these countries and communities — we meet the people we work with face-to-face and invest in close relationships. We have seen first-hand how local communities truly appreciate our participants and the way that our students and local communities have learned from each other. CISaustralia has been placing and supporting students on our volunteer programs for a number of years and have seen the ongoing positive contributions year on year.

Another one of our primary goals is for students to gain academic credit for their overseas program.

This helps contribute to a more robust reflective process, a deeper understanding and critical analysis of the experience, and helps volunteers better understand their role and impact associated with their contributions. To date, we have achieved this goal, with over 98% of our students receiving academic credit for their volunteering experience abroad.

CISaustralia operates with integrity in a professional manner, with dedication to the highest standards of honesty, transparency and ethics. We pride ourselves in having the strongest global partners who are socially responsible and equally committed to their local communities and ethical practices.

"It is amazing. The kids are so beautiful. Helping a community of women build their community and teaching the children English were some of the best parts. Nepal was such a life-changing experience for me. It is 100 percent worth going."

Nakita T, La Trobe University, Rural Community Development in Nepal

TESTIMONIALS

University and Partner Testimonials

"Through CISaustralia students are able to participate in real world hands-on environmental work in counties including South Africa, Peru, Tanzania, Uganda, Costa Rica and New Zealand. Over 500 Deakin University environmental science (wildlife and conservation biology) students have participated in one of the many CISaustralia programs and every student has come home having immersed in a unique international experience and in doing so contributed to conservation on a global scale."

Raylene Cooke, Associate Professor, Deakin University

"With the assistance of the CISaustralia participants, we have managed to engage and further a number of meaningful programs on the reserve such as the removal of alien vegetation, improve antipoaching efforts, monitor the wildlife population and further the community outreach program with the local communities, amongst others."

Shakir Jeeva, Chief Executive Officer, Big Five Wildlife Management and Conservation in South Africa

"CISaustralia has been an integral part of our programs growth and success in the Philippines. The contribution of services extended through the volunteers has allowed the organisation to sustain most of the community-based projects even with limited resources. Volunteers who willingly accepted the challenges faced by the organization to make a difference to the lives of the less privileged."

Helena Claire "Wimwim" A. Canayong, Director of Operations, Community Development in the Philippines

"Through CISaustralia we are able to increase the number of participation in our program, reaching a wider audience, getting more hands to complete our ongoing projects, and introducing more potential marine conservationists to the skills and knowledge they need to pursue their careers. We have had only great experiences with CISaustralia and the students they send to our program."

Chad Scott, Program Director, Marine Conservation in Thailand

Student Testimonials

"Totally immerse yourself in the community, culture and in the joy of serving people. In return you will be welcomed, loved and want to go back (or stay forever). The experience, teaching in the schools, understanding more about the education system and the culture in the Philippines were the best parts. The students were a pleasure to teach and so respectful. The staff were accommodating and helpful. Best three weeks ever!"

Karlene A, QUT, Community Development in the Philippines

"This has honestly been such an amazing experience. There isn't anything I can fault. The entire placement was one amazing day after another. The diving was amazing, the staff were amazing, the food was amazing. I can't speak more highly of it. I loved every minute of it and will remember it for the rest of my life!"

Amber M, Deakin University, Marine Conservation in Belize

"This was one of the most wonderful experiences of my life! Well run, ethical program that gave me the opportunity to partake in a diverse range of activities including teaching English, assisting with water runs to villages and teaching sports to the school children. I had wonderful support from the staff. I would recommend this program to any student or aspiring volunteer wishing to learn more about Khmer culture and help some children truly in need. I found it a truly refreshing and humble experience that filled me with so much joy."

Lachlan K, Flinders University, Teaching and Community Development in Cambodia
